

Political Contributions Policy (Australia)

Purpose

This document sets out the Transurban Group's policy in relation to payments to political parties and individuals holding or standing for elected office (political contributions) in Australia.

Risks to the Transurban Group associated with political contributions potentially arise as a result of:

- Breach of Federal or State electoral laws (including exceeding caps or failing to meet disclosure obligations).
- Breach of Federal or State bribery or corruption laws.
- Contributions made during sensitive periods (potentially, even where the Group has complied with applicable laws), with associated reputational issues.

Policy

Transurban Group's policy regarding political contributions is as follows:

- The Group does not make political donations or contributions of any nature to any political party, politician, elected official or candidate for public office in Australia.

Legal Requirements

Transurban will review the effectiveness of this Policy annually, or if necessary, earlier if there is a change in law regarding political contributions in Australia.

Variations to Policy

Any material amendments to this policy must be approved by the Transurban Group Board.
